

FIFTY THOUSAND TURKISH TROOPS SURRENDER TODAY

SERVIANS CAPTURE MONASTIR AND FORCE GARRISON TO LAY DOWN THEIR ARMS.

SITUATION IS INTENSE

Meanwhile Ottoman Troops Repulse The Bulgarians' Attack on The Fortresses Near Constantinople—Many Deaths From Cholera.

Belgrade, Nov. 18.—The Turkish fortress of Monastir with its garrison of fifty thousand well armed troops and three generals commanding today capitulated to the invading Serbian forces this afternoon.

Constantinople, Nov. 18.—The Sultan today telegraphed his felicitations to the Turkish army at Tchaatalla for yesterday's success over the Bulgarians. He congratulated Nazim Pasha, the commander in chief whom he requested to give his salutations to the troops. The commander-in-chief replied to the Sultan that his message had been a source of great encouragement to the soldiers and that the army had offered up prayers for his majesty.

Mrs. Russell Sage has sent a donation of $5,000 through Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, president of the American College for Girls at Soutari for the relief of the Turkish wounded.

Loan Bluejackets. A detachment of 100 British bluejackets has been lent by the British cruiser Weymouth to guard the United States embassy as the American station ship Scorpion has been allotted to duty on the upper Bosporus and the American cruisers are not expected to arrive here before the end of the month.

America's Part. Washington, Nov. 18.—The men landed in Constantinople yesterday from the United States station ship Scorpion were part of a force of 2,000 which the diplomatic corps decided to send ashore as a matter of precaution. Advice received at the state department today indicate that Constantinople remains quiet, but that it was thought desirable after a conference among the foreign representatives to send troops ashore to occupy the embassies and legations.

The commanders of the international fleet have made arrangements for the protection of foreign residents on both sides of the Bosphorus from San Stefano to Duzlukere. It is believed their plans will be adequate to meet any emergency.

Fight Continues. Belgrade, Nov. 18.—A fierce fight for the possession of the Turkish fortress of Monastir continues between the Serbian and Greek on the one side and the Turkish garrison on the other. The defenders of the city knowing that their line of communication with Ochrida has been cut, are fighting desperately. The losses of the Serbians have been heavy. During the first day's battle 250 of them were killed and wounded.

Thanks Recruits. Rieka, Montenegro, Nov. 18.—A large number of Montenegrans who have returned from America to fight for their country were received by King Nicholas yesterday. He thanked them for fulfilling their duty to their fatherland and expressed the hope that their services would not be needed, as negotiations had been opened by Turkey for an armistice.

Awful Scenes. Berlin, Nov. 18.—The liveliest imagination would be unable to depict the frightful conditions existing among the Turkish troops at Haidarkei on the lines of Tchaatalla according to Major Eugene Swanger, the war correspondent of the Tageblatt. He says thousands of dead and dying lie along the road. Men with stretchers are engaged day and night gathering the dead for burial and the wounded for transport to the hospitals.

Seek Wounded. He continued, "Wherever I looked I saw the distorted faces and stiffening hands of the wounded stretched forward appealing for help. The nearer I approached to the railway station the sadder grew the picture. The railway station itself is just a field full of dead. I saw in one car ten men, five of whom were living and the other five dead, their faces still expressing the horrible agonies they had passed through. I walked among piles of corpses and among masses of groaning sick men who soon would find relief in death.

"A train about to start was over-crowded with cholera stricken men. Many of those in the cars died soon after they got aboard. According to authentic information the deaths from cholera number 5,000 daily along the line of Tchaatalla.

Cholera Prevalent. Another dispatch to the Tageblatt from Kustindje Roumania to which place it had been sent by wireless says 1,000 cholera cases and 200 deaths occurred daily among the Turkish reses at San Stefano where the sick and the dead lie indiscriminately on the streets.

Attack Failed. London, Nov. 18.—The first Bulgarian attack on the Turkish line of fortifications defending Constantinople at Tchaatalla has failed. The whole of the Bulgarian army was engaged. Every available man was moved to the front from the Bulgarian forces investing Adrianople where they were relieved by Serbian troops.

The Bulgarians with all their artillery began their advance on the Tchaatalla fortifications on Saturday and continued the bombardment of the works throughout Sunday. Observers who have been to the Turkish front agree that the capture of the Tchaatalla lines must prove a task of tremendous difficulty.

Enormous Losses. London, Eng., Nov. 18.—The siege of Adrianople has cost Bulgaria enormous sacrifices according to a special dispatch from Sofia. It appears that the fighting which followed last Sunday's sortie by the Turkish garrison was of a most sanguinary character. Several thousands of soldiers of the armies were killed or wounded.

INTEGRITY OF FIVE MEN IN HAWTHORNE GROUP IS INVOLVED

In Case Brought by Federal Government Charging Misuse of Mails To Secure Sale of Mining Stock.

New York, Nov. 18.—The Federal government called for trial in the United States district court here today what is considered one of its most important cases growing out of alleged misuses of the mails. "It involves the integrity of the so-called Hawthorne group of mining stock and brings to the bar as defendants men of national reputation. There are five in number, Julian Hawthorne, son of the novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Joshua Quincy, former mayor of Boston and assistant secretary of state in the Cleveland administration, Albert Freeman, a promoter, Dr. William J. Norton, a nerve specialist and John McKinnon, secretary-treasurer of the Hawthorne company.

All were engaged directly or indirectly in the sale of stock in the Hawthorne Silver and Iron Mines Company and allied concerns and were indicted in New York in January last for alleged use of the mails to defraud investors. The government contends that at least three million dollars accrued from the sale of securities, that sales were effected through misrepresentation of the character of the properties and that notwithstanding promises no dividends have been paid.

The defendants maintain that they have been the victims of a ruthless crusade on the part of the postoffice department.

BERGSTERMAN CASE IS CALLED IN CIRCUIT COURT

GOVERNMENT CERTAIN TO ACCEPT REPORTS OF THE ENGINEERS

Who Have Been Making the Survey of Rock River With a View to Making it Navigable.

There seems to be little doubt on the part of the engineers and others conversant with the recent survey of Rock river with a view to making it a navigable stream, that the report will be received with favor.

"I see no engineering prospect of an insurmountable nature in the plan to make Rock River navigable between Sterling and Janesville, Wis.," is the statement of United States Engineer H. Edson Reeves, at the government office in Rock Falls, after the work of breaking camp and ending up the long summer's work along the 110 miles of river bed that has kept his party busy since May.

The young engineer, who was entrusted with this important work by Capt. L. L. Wheeler talked very interestingly of the work. Although he prefaced his remarks with the statement that everything is now in a state of uncertainty, and any facts or figures given by him are subject to the changes that will follow the complete summing up of all the data of the survey. The work finished today is merely the field work, and it will take Mr. Reeves and eight assistants two months at least to compute the data, "reduce the notes," as it is termed in engineering language. Then the system of work will be outlined, the sites of dams and locks placed in maps, the dredging work figured out and an approximate estimate made of the cost of the work. Mr. Reeves does not think the cost will be by any means a prohibitive figure.

Up to War Department. The complete plans, specifications and maps will be submitted to the board of engineers of the war department, who have charge of all waterway improvements in the United States, and if the board should not approve of the project, that would probably end the matter. If the board does regard the plan as feasible and advisable, then it is a demand made by congressmen from the interested territory, the plan will no doubt be submitted to congress repeatedly until favorably acted upon.

Eleven Dams Needed. As it appears from the early figures, eleven dams will be needed with the one lock in each dam made the size of the Hennepin canal locks, 170 by 35 feet. The average lift of these locks would be about 10 feet, making a total lift by artificial means of about 110 feet between the government dam at Sterling and the upper dam at Janesville.

Six Dams Now In. Six of the required dams are now constructed, one each at Dixon, Rockford, Rockton, Beloit and the lower dam at Janesville. It would be necessary to build dams at Grand Detour, Byron, Roscoe and Afton, though it may be found practical to raise the Rockton dam high enough to obviate the necessity of another dam between that place and Beloit.

Take Five or Six Years. The actual construction work would take five or six years if done by a force of the ordinary size. The construction work on one dam and lock, with the necessary dredging between dams, would mean about one year's work per dam.

Between Sterling and Dixon, it would be more practical to dredge below the Dixon dam than to raise the government dam at Sterling. The government dam at Sterling and the upper dam at Janesville are not included in the work, and would not be affected by the improvement. The local dam could not be raised much without injuring Dixon's water power, and that will not be done. Dredging will solve the problem with comparative ease.

Carry 600 Ton Barges. The seven foot channel would be of varying widths, but always big enough to float barges of 600 tons, with ample passage room. Any boat that could go through the canal could go up the river.

People Interested. The engineers found the people along the river interested in the project of making the stream navigable. Many manufacturers and the leading men of the cities visited are eager for the improvement, and in the smaller towns and through the country many of the people did not see the advantage of boat freight rates and wondered why the government cared to bother with the river. The ultimate consummation of the work will be up to the people who will be benefited by it. If a persistent demand is made for the improvement, in case the war department approves of the plans, Rock river will some day be navigable for 110 miles of its course, in touch with all the world by a direct waterway route.

INSURGENT WOODMEN LOOK FOR VICTORY IN COURTS.

Hastings, Neb., Nov. 18.—A suit brought by the Nebraska "insurgents" of the Modern Woodmen of America, who seek to prevent the head officers of the fraternity from putting into effect the increased rates agreed upon at the Chicago meeting last spring, came up for hearing before Judge Dungan here today. The members who are back of the suit have found much encouragement in the recent decision of Judge Bradshaw at Des Moines, in which he denied the proposed increase in the rates of the fraternal insurance society. The Nebraska suit is to be conducted by the same attorneys and on the same lines of evidence as the Iowa case.

fight against the apportionment as determined by Supervisor of Assessments P. A. Taylor, and with Mr. Taylor standing firm on his report as published, the final outcome remains a matter of speculation. The board may decide to dispose of the matter summarily or the session may be prolonged for the entire week depending on the manner in which developments occur.

It is probable, however, that should the discussion verge too much toward a personal attack on Mr. Taylor's work as an official, as some of the supervisors fear, judgment from the honor of the meeting Thursday morning when the matter first came before the board, the supervisors will stand firm on adopting the report of Mr. Taylor as recommended by the equalization committee. Beloit's only recourse, then, would be a reassessment which is admittedly, from this city's experience at least, a doubtful remedy.

Prepares Case.

Mr. Taylor, who has been engaged in the reassessment work at Racine county, returned to this city Saturday evening, and is busily engaged today preparing for his statement to the board tomorrow. He was in no position to give out a statement today, he said, owing to the fact that he did not wish to indicate in any way what he would have to say to the supervisors Tuesday. He could not say what possibility there will be for a reassessment but hinted that he would have something important to say on the whole matter. Mr. Taylor's presentation of the matter is awaited with keenest anticipation on the part of all concerned.

Beloit's side of the case will be presented by Mayor L. E. Cunningham and City Attorney Harry W. Adams, who were delegated at a mass meeting of Line City citizens to aid the Beloit supervisors in proving their contentions. Frank P. Starr of this city has been retained by them, in the capacity of a tax expert and will doubtless have something to say to the board in Beloit's behalf.

Beloit vs. Janesville.

As the situation lines up it appears to be a fight between the two cities, Janesville and Beloit. Janesville men for some years past have been charging that Beloit has been underassessed which also seems to be Mr. Taylor's view according to the increases he has made and according to his own statement of the case. Beloit's main cause for grievance, it seems, is the valuation of their merchants' and manufacturers' stocks. Merchants' stocks in the Line City were valued by her own assessors at $336,650 and the true value was placed on the same stocks by Mr. Taylor at $1,241,538. The manufacturers' stocks were valued by the assessors at $353,700 and by Mr. Taylor at $3,000,000. Beloit men are loud in their outcry against this increase. They point to the Janesville figures and charge discrimination, unfairness, inequality and manifest injustice. They want Mr. Taylor to prove that their valuation should be increased to that amount.

As far as Janesville is concerned there cannot be much question as to the assessment figures as they were determined only a year ago by the state tax commission experts. At that time the assessed valuation was boosted five millions. Mr. Taylor's attitude has been that Beloit was probably as badly assessed as Janesville and that a proportionate raise should be made to equalize the county apportionment. He claims his investigations have substantiated this opinion.

Is a Vital Matter.

The adjusting of the valuations between the various tax districts in the county is a vital matter, it is pointed out, for the reason that on the apportionment of valuations depends the relative amounts of state and county taxes which must be raised in Rock county. According to the present apportionment Beloit would pay nearly one-third more of these taxes than ever was the case in the past.

It is difficult to predict just how the representatives of the townships will line up on the question. As the committee will report recommending the adoption of Mr. Taylor's figures the weight of proof will rest with the Beloit side, and the tendency will be for the board to act on their committee's advice. The result is a matter of conjecture in which citizens of Beloit and Janesville are vitally interested.

The table accompanying this article gives the assessors' and Mr. Taylor's figures on the merchants' and manufacturers' stock which has caused the greatest protest from the Beloit delegation.

"REX," CHIEF'S FOND COMPANION IS DEAD

Little Irish Terrier, Seldom Absent From Side of Chief of Police Appleby Dies Alone.

"Rex" is dead. The tiny Irish terrier, firm and devoted companion of Chief of Police George Appleby was found dead yesterday morning in the room where it had been left to spend the night. Rex had not been sick. Saturday afternoon he ran about the police station and city hall corridors, nosed visitors, peered out of the windows at dogs passing by and barked challenges in response to their yelps at teams and canine acquaintances. It is feared that Rex died of a broken heart. For a week his master had been away, and Rex showed evident signs of being lonesome and disconsolate. Then, too, he had reached old age as the years of dogs are numbered, for he came into the possession of the chief when he was sheriff, some nine or ten years ago. Rex will be missed by visitors to the police station and the municipal court, many of whom had a word or kindly pat for him. He will be missed by "Newt," the station mascot, who with him chased intruder dogs from off the city hall lawn. Most of all will he be missed by Chief of Police Appleby, from whose side he was seldom absent. His barks of challenge, indignation, and joy will no longer echo through the city hall corridors.

CHIEF APPLEBY'S DOG "REX"

HARRY HARRISON SUMMONED BY DEATH

Former Janesville Young Man Stricken With Heart Failure at Sioux City Yesterday Morning.

Suddenly stricken with heart failure, Harry Harrison, a former Janesville young man, died yesterday morning at Sioux City, Iowa, where he was conducting a circulation contest for one of the local daily newspapers. The news of his death was received with shock and profound sorrow by his numerous friends in this city, to whom when last seen he appeared to be in good, if not vigorous health. The remains of Mr. Harrison will arrive here from Sioux City, Tuesday noon, accompanied by his widow and Volney Atwood, her cousin, and the funeral will be held from the home of E. P. Dorr, 414 South East street, at three o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Harry Harrison was born in Stoughton, June 1, 1877, and was married in this city to Miss Josephine Doty on June 11, 1910. He lived in Janesville for about five years, being employed as bookkeeper by F. A. Taylor, and later entering the employment of the Janesville Gazette. Later he entered the employ of the American Circulation company, becoming their contest manager. A year ago he conducted the circulation campaign for the Janesville Gazette, afterwards conducting similar campaigns in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and other cities. He would have finished his work at Sioux City in another week.

Surviving Mr. Harrison are his grief-stricken widow, three brothers and one sister. His death will be mourned by all his acquaintances, for with him acquaintances were friends. He was a young man of blameless character, of enterprise, and ambition; inspired by generous impulses, and beloved for his genial and straightforward manners.

of the most active and devoted. Odd fellows in the city and members of Janesville Lodge No. 14, I. O. O. F., turned out in large numbers to pay their last respects and tribute to a life of unselfish service. Mr. Taylor was born in Candor, Tioga county, New York, July 13, 1844, and emigrated to Wisconsin in the year it attained statehood. He was a painter by trade, in his later years taking up the practice of photography.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

A FEW FACTS.

An answer to the piece headed "The Public Highway," in the Gazette, Nov. 12, 1912.

I was away most of the week so did not notice this piece, but it was called to my attention the other day. I don't know whether a booster, the Gazette or a knocker wrote this piece, but at any rate they either didn't know any better or they intended to tell a falsehood.

As I understand the boosters went out on November 8, on this particular mentioned road and if they will jog their memory they will remember it rained on November 8, and that anybody with good judgment ought to know that a newly built gravel road would not be as firm as an old road. The county board and the highway commissioner never consider a gravel road completed until nearly a year after construction.

Your statement that the above road has been impassable for the past two months is certainly far from the truth as the rural mail carrier who travels the road every day except Sunday says "I consider the above road a No. 1A road, especially when you consider the immense travel on the same."

You write that it did not appear to the builder that he could build this road in sections. This is the very thing he was instructed to do and attempted to do, but could not be fulfilled on account of conditions. Another statement, that the gravel was dumped through the center for the whole stretch. Where did you want it? The gravel was put on in uniform depth and width.

In regard to the nineteen townships out of twenty appropriating money is very true, but stating that the state gave an equal amount is an error. The county gave an equal amount whereas the state gave two-sevenths of the total amount.

True enough we have a highway commissioner and it was only on Nov. 14, Mr. Horbiss, secretary of the State Highway Commission in speaking before the county board stated, that Rock county had a good highway commissioner and that if the State Highway Commission had the appointment of one in Rock county they would appoint the same one, and they are familiar with the work done in Rock county as they make all plans and sign all contracts for the work.

In regard to the farmer plowing up the road in front of his place where it is in good condition, I must say that this is another mistake as I have been over as much of the county as the most of Janesville boosters of the Gazette and will say that I fail to find the conditions as they described and and if so they would be prosecuted in the county as soon as in the city.

If the Janesville boosters would look to home about their own city they would have enough to take up their attention for some time. Here are a few places they might observe. What about the condition of Milton avenue from St. Mary's avenue, out to the city limits, ever since the city street railway extended its track, and also East Milwaukee avenue. For another place of quick street repaving, look at Washington street which has been almost in an impassable condition for nearly the past year. There are many other streets which you haven't even attempted to blow up and grade.

In closing I will say that if any of the Janesville boosters or the Gazette want to take their machine, I will go with them and show them more than a mile of new road built this year which is nearly as good as any of the streets in Janesville with the exception of their brick pavements.

Football is to get a knockout blow in Texas this winter, it is said. A bill will be introduced in the legislature making it a crime to play the game, and this bill has already been endorsed by about one half the legislators.

Close students of football say the east and west are likely to split in another year and play under different rules. The forward pass is making the trouble. Eastern football experts don't like the forward pass while in the west the play is very popular. The western members of the football rules committee wanted to split last winter, but were persuaded to keep in another year.

John Ganzel, who managed the Cincinnati Reds several years ago, and who piloted the Rochester team to three pennants in four years, is being talked of as manager of the New York Yankees for 1913. Ganzel is anxious to return to the major leagues as a manager.

Patsy Flaherty, whose last major league engagement was with the Boston Braves, is a candidate for manager of the Elmira team of the New York State league. Billy Sullivan of the Chicago White Sox also put in a bid, but later withdrew it.

Though the New York Americans will train in Bermuda, it will in no sense be a winter baseball stunt, as it is not planned to go to the islands before March 1.

Being manager of a baseball team affects a man's batting eye, at least in St. Louis. While Bobby Wallace was manager of the St. Louis Americans, Stovall was hitting over the .300 mark, while Wallace was barely above .200. Just as soon as Stovall took charge his batting eye failed him, and he finished last season lower than at any other time in years. On the other hand, Wallace picked up and batted close to .250, which is some points higher than he batted while manager.

Should Horace Fogel be forced out of the ownership of the Philadelphia Phillies, he can get $10,000 for an inside story on the baseball trust, says a Philadelphia report.

DAVIS TO MANAGE N. Y. AMERICANS

Harry Davis.

New York American league fans are keenly interested in the selection of a manager to succeed Harry Wolverton, recently deceased. It's up to President Farrell, and as yet he has said nothing for publication about the identity of Wolverton's successor. A rumor is floating around, however, that Harry Davis, late manager of the Cleveland Naps, has been picked for the job. Davis had a chance to manage the New York club last year, but owing to his connection with the Naps at the time was unable to consider the proposition.

JANESVILLE TO MEET MADISON THIS WEEK

GAME WITH CAPITOL CITY ELEVEN WILL UNDOUBTEDLY BE ARRANGED AT THIS CITY SATURDAY.

THREE TEAMS IN LINE

Eau Claire Has Been Eliminated From Contest According to Reports Leaving Janesville, Oshkosh, Madison.

Eau Claire is now eliminated from the claim of state championship. Madison defeated La Crosse by a 23 to 0 score, while Eau Claire only defeated them by a score of 6 to 0. This leaves Madison, Janesville and Oshkosh still in the running for the title. Janesville wishes to announce their strength and claims a chance to be in the finals. If the locals line up with Madison Saturday and defeat them, then the locals and Oshkosh will fight it out for the title. It is hoped a game can be arranged with the Madison team at Janesville, as the weather may prevent many more games and leave the championship in doubt.

Madison Downs La Crosse. Madison and La Crosse fought it out at Camp Randall on Saturday at Madison, in one of the hardest fought games ever played between two high schools. The title of state champions was at stake, and Madison won by the score of 23 to 0, which does not indicate the playing in the least. Hard luck at times for La Crosse favored Madison and was the reason for the high score made. The game was full of thrills and for the first half it was anybody's game.

By a quick start Madison secured a touchdown, playing the La Crosse team off their feet. The northern school came back and really showed the Capitol City boys some classy football playing, forcing the ball to their opponents goal only to lose it on a fumble. A. Strum, the giant quarterback, for La Crosse was the star, and his steady playing in running the team together with his long runs proved a feature of the contest. Punting on both sides was a fizzle, as the kicks were short and high, giving the spectators some poor playing at times.

Score is Misleading. The Madison team really were the better team but only by a small margin and the score should have been much closer. Bondi, the Madison fullback, was not playing in his good form, the La Crosse tacklers being on his neck all the time. The most sensational run came in the third quarter, when Nelson, the crack Madison quarterback, received a punt on his own 35 yard line, running through the entire La Crosse team for a touchdown. He was very fast and his dodging was a marvel. After this run, the La Crosse team gave up and allowed their opponents to score almost at will.

This much boasted of Madison team may meet defeat at the hands of the locals, if they can come to terms on arranging a game. Next Saturday is the date that Madison wants, and they want to play at Janesville. If this game is arranged, it will settle the final picking for the high school champions of Wisconsin.

Janesville Wins Easily. Janesville once more were victors on last Saturday when they whalloped the fast Darlington team by the overwhelming score of 61 to 7. And now they are anxious to have a return game at Darlington on Thanksgiving Day. The game was played so raggedly that the locals will undoubtedly refuse their challenge. It only proved a good practice game for Janesville and they are sorry now that they did not make the score up to 100, as they think they could have done. From the first whistle the local team began to score and before the game was half over they were sick of running their legs off and sort of gave up. Edler and Fatter again starred, and Ryan loomed up as a punger at fullback, when he was sent over for three touchdowns. He also kicked seven out of nine attempts at goal. Edler made five counters, and Dalton, the crack left guard for the locals, added Janesville's ninth touchdown.

Only One Touchdown. The only touchdown for Darlington came in the third period, when their left halfback ran 70 yards through the locals. Five locals were brushed off, by this man in his attempt to cross the goal line. The game was featured by long runs by the Janesville backs. Capt. Connell was not playing. He is saving himself for future use, and as he was not needed, it made little difference whether he played or not. Before the game ended Janesville had a new line, their subs playing in fine form. During the last five minutes, the locals found themselves to be playing with only ten men, one of the men having thought he was asked to retire. Acting Captain Cannon was the star man of the battle, and he proved an obstacle in the line when Darlington was trying line plunges. He will give the Madison center a run for his money and also as an all-state man.

THE HOME MARKET.

In another part of this paper will be found the second of a series of articles on the mail order house as a menace to business. The Gazette has arranged with the National Business Publicity Association of Milwaukee for an article of this kind to appear once a week for a year.

This association is under the management of Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Wheelock, both old newspaper men, connected with the Milwaukee press for many years. The object is to educate the consumer to patronize the home market, and to checkmate the mail order houses, which will spring up like mushrooms, after the first of the year, when the parcels post is to be established.

The cost of this service is $100 a year, and the plan of the association is to ask the business men to pay for it, as the papers donate the space to publish it in the interests of the merchants. In other words the merchants and the paper work together to protect the home market from invasion.

Mr. Sullivan spent a couple of days in the city recently, and secured the money for the first year's service. Some of the merchants conceived the idea that it was a money-making scheme, on the part of the Gazette, and were free to criticize.

If there was any truth in the assumption, the criticism would be just, but there is not. The paper donates space, which is worth several hundred dollars, without receiving a penny in return. The sole object is to help the home merchants to hold their trade.

The paper is a part of the town, and interested in everything that pertains to its welfare. Mr. Cunningham pays it a compliment by saying that it is read by 14,000 people in the city, and he is talking by the card.

PUBLIC SPIRIT.

The "Made in Janesville" week was a success in every way, as evidenced by the crowds which thronged the auditorium, and the choice display of home made goods so liberally furnished by Janesville manufacturers. To Secretary Lane of the Commercial club, is largely due the success of the exhibit, and the boosters who invaded the county and advertised the event were rewarded by a liberal attendance.

The success of this undertaking shows what can be accomplished by united effort, and the fact that it was a success is a gratifying compliment to the spirit of enterprise, which lies so close to the surface that it is ready to respond on short notice.

The things close at hand are so common that their value is seldom appreciated, and a home exhibit is a forceful reminder of what the home city represents. It stimulates a spirit of pride, and encourages loyalty. The men who contributed so freely of time and money, are entitled to the gratitude of the community, which they served so well.

While the city is not growing rapidly it is progressing along substantial lines. It has a wonderful hold on the county as a home market, because of the enterprise of the merchants and business men. It pays to work together on all lines that tend to mutual prosperity, and the "Made in Janesville" week is an object lesson which should stimulate union of effort.

A GOOD SCHEME.

Of late Bingham, Me., has been able to say that it had fewer tramps than any other town of its size in the state, says a writer in Technical World magazine for December. The reason for this is a "tramp chair."

This chair is made in the form of a common upright chair of strap iron, but is encased, the door being made of the same strap-iron material. It is on wheels and can be moved to any part of the town. Not a great while ago a tramp went to the village and there being no lockup there, the officers had occasion to take care of the man, and he was put into the tramp chair.

It is not known how long the tramp stayed there but at least long enough so that he wanted to get out of the town as quickly as he could. He evidently got word to his brother tramps and warned them to stay clear of Bingham, as no tramps have been seen in the town since.

This sort of an easy chair for the "wary Willie," and a stone pile, with a ninety day sentence for the habitual drunk, might be a good thing for Janesville.

It is easy to criticize the saloon and condemn the brothel, as a menace to morality, but these are only surface indications of the root of many evils, for which the home is responsible. The girl who parades the streets, in short dresses, usually invites the insult which she receives and it seems like a farce to expect the law to protect her. The boy who loafs on the corner is not a street wail. Both the boy and the girl are the product of a home which passes for a good home. What the city needs, more than anything else, is a moral awakening at its social centers. A "Billy Sunday" revival just now, would have a wholesome effect.

The city of Beloit is being treated to a taste of latter day Reform, and the taxpayers feel very much as their neighbors did in Janesville, when the extra assessment was ordered. There is but little consolation in the fact that taxes have increased 400 per cent, during the last decade, but it accounts for the demand for funds, and the instructions sent out from headquarters to "go out and get the money." We are all in the same boat. The freight is due, and somebody has got to pay it. The people generally seem to like it, and even Beloit voted to continue the reform administration.

The state law which attempts to regulate Sunday occupations has so long been a dead letter that it is practically obsolete. The state recognizes the right of cities to regulate themselves on many questions of morality, and public sentiment determines the degree of regulation. If the Sunday theatres are ever closed in Janesville, it will be by an act of the city authorities, and not by state interference.

President-elect Wilson will find no trouble in knowing just what to do, for "Colliers" is out with an open letter telling him all about it, even to the smallest detail. "The national weekly" is a great regulator, and what it doesn't know about running the government, is hardly worth finding out. When the Chicago Tribune gets its second wind, Collier's will have an able assistant.

BRYCE'S SUCCESSOR

TRAINED DIPLOMAT

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice.

Mr. Arthur Cecil Spring-Rice, who will succeed Mr. Bryce as ambassador to the United States from England, has had a wide experience as a diplomat. He began his work in this field in 1885, when at the age of twenty-seven he came to the United States to act as third secretary at Washington. In 1889 he was appointed secretary to the British delegate to the international maritime conference. After serving for a time at Brussels and Tokyo he was transferred to Washington in 1893. He was charge d'affaires at Tehran in 1900 and minister to Persia in 1906-07. He is now serving as minister to Sweden.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

A Strenuous Courtship.

Hank annexed a motorcycle. Of the chugging, snorting kind. Then he went and called for Sadie. And she clambered on behind.

Through the city streets they snorted.

Forty-seven miles an hour, Searing people, dogs and horses, Always crowding on more power.

Sadie wrapped both arms around him. And she hung on for dear life. Faster, faster, cutting through the atmosphere just like a knife.

Joining, jarring, popping, snapping. Like the Fourth day of July. And the wings of John D.'s petrol. Did our Hank and Sadie fly.

Hank, he hollered: "Honest, Sadie. Aint it what you might call bliss? 'Tis a cinch, my little lady, I could ride through life like this."

"There ain't nuthin' to prevent it," Screamed out Sadie in his ear. But the motor was so noisy. Hank could not exactly hear.

Seven times did Sadie scream and try to make him understand; Finally he got her answer. And he blushed to beat the band.

Then he turned around to kiss her. 'Tis a foolish thing to do When you're on a bumpy highway. And your hitting fifty-two.

Some time later they were rescued. They were hanging in a tree; Sadie, she was bruised and shaken. Hank had just a busted knee.

In the hospital they married. Showing that they still had spunk. Then he sold the motorcycle. To a man who dealt in junk.

That was many months ago and now on cycles they don't ride. But they run a horseless carriage. With a cherub tucked inside.

According to Uncle Abner. Elmer Jones who canvassed for crayon portraits got an order for a picture of Uncle Ezra Harkins, but when it got there nobody knewed it was supposed to be Uncle Ezra, because it had a necktie on and there wasn't no tobacco juice on the chin. Reginald Hickey, our actor who is spendin' the winter here with his mother, says he never played in Vaudeville and doesn't even know what state it is in, but he has played in Proutyville several times. This is getting to be quite a metropolitan place. Hank Tumms trimmed the fringe off the bottom of his pants in Lem Schoogs' feed cutter Thursday. Miss Euphenia Mudge has had 500 calling cards printed at the Clarion office this week, so it must be she ain't fignering on changin' her name very soon. The last lot she got lasted fourteen years.

Hod Peters' oldest son has gone into musical comedy. He and his wife have invented a dance that ain't fit to look at and somebody has written a show around it.

Hi Spink has had rubber heels put on his shoes and has accepted a lucrative position as collector for an installment house.

Anse Judson is not making any new friends this season and is gettin' rid of all of the old ones by lending them $5 apiece.

Some people never deceive you, for you always know they are lyin'. It is a long lane that has no house that has been mortgaged to buy an automobile.

No feller will hand you a raw deal with more neatness and dispatch than a relative. It seems as though nothing kin happen in this world without bringin' on a war in the Balkins.

Nothing to Do Till Tomorrow.

The life of an editor is one path of sweet scented, blushing roses. If you don't believe it ask any editor. All he has got to do is work. One of the esteemed Michigan weekly editors sizes up the matter as follows:

"To run a newspaper all a fellow has to do is to be able to write poems, discuss the tariff and money questions, umpire a baseball game, report a wedding, saw wood, describe a fire so that the readers will shed their wraps, make $1 do the work of $10, shine at a dance, measure calico, abuse the liquor habit, test whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack free silver, wear diamonds, invent advertisements, sneer at snobbery, overlook scandal, appraise babies, delight pumpkin raisers, minister to the afflicted, heal the disgruntled, fight to a finish, set type, hold opinions, sweep the office, speak at the prayer meetings and stand in with everybody and everything."

Long Courtships.

Young ladies in Russia are not at all averse to long engagements, and use all sorts of artifices to stave off the wedding day as long as possible; but in no country in the world are courtships so abnormally long as in Bohemia, where engagements commonly last from 15 to 20 years. In fact, there recently died there, at the age of ninety-nine, an old man who had been courting for 75 years, and who was married on his death-bed.

Easy Enough.

Barry is literary rather than mathematical in his tastes. His teacher was trying to initiate him into the mysteries of division. During the struggle she said in despair: "Don't you even know how many times three goes into twelve?" "Aw, that's easy," said the eight-year-old in disgust, "three times and three over."—Woman's Home Companion.

Want It All.

Some people are so anxious to get the worth of their money that they would take a slow train in preference to an express.—Philadelphia Record.

A DANGEROUS PREJUDICE

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE MIDDLEMAN WOULD BE A DEADLY BLOW TO THE COMPETITIVE SYSTEM.

There is a growing prejudice against the middlemen engaged in trade which had its birth in ignorance and is destined, if not checked, to lead to disastrous results.

There are but three possible social systems under which we can live and do business: Competition, Private Monopoly, and State Socialism. There may be modifications and combinations of these systems, but any attempt to modify or combine them results in a Freak, a Mongrel, which magnifies the evils and dwarfs the virtues of the systems combined.

In the competitive system middlemen are necessary because they are a part of the system.

Private monopolies do without the middlemen when they choose, and the consumers are at the mercy of the monopolists.

State socialism would be the worst of all forms of monopoly, for under that system the Government would be Master and the people Slaves.

If we are to preserve our individual freedom we must stand by the system that employs the middleman as its distributing agent—the competitive system.

The middleman is a necessary factor in our industrial life—he is the distributor of goods, wares and merchandise.

He takes the products of the farms and factories from the points of production, where there is no use to which they can be put, and provides for their transportation to places where there is a demand for them.

In this way he adds value to the products. He does not change the form of the article like the man who guides the machine that manufactures it, but he takes it from the hands of the producer who wants to dispose of it and delivers it to the man who wants to use it, and adds a definite value thereby.

He renders a service that must be performed by some one, and any step designed to dispense with his services is a step toward centralization, Monopoly, and a step away from the Open Door of Opportunity for the Individual.

The Standard Oil Company is the most perfect type of business centralization known to us. That company does away with the middleman so far as it is able. It combines the functions of producer and distributor in itself.

Are the people of this country willing to accept the Standard Oil Company as their ideal? Do they contemplate joining that company in its war on the middleman?

—Either they must support competition with the middleman as a part of the system, or they must adopt the Standard Oil Company system and surrender to monopoly.

Which will they choose?

PRAYERS.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire Unuttered or expressed.

All persons pray.

Some of them may do so unconsciously; some pray on their knees; some on their feet; some pray aloud; some utter no word—but all pray.

Some pray in thought or desire; some in deed; some pray piteous prayers; some the prayer of anguish; some the fierce imprecatory prayer—but all pray.

Look about you. Cannot you see the prayers?

Here is a crippled boy. He lies with twisted legs in a big baby carriage and offers lead pencils to the passersby. If you will look into his eyes you will see an appealing prayer.

Yonder is a scrubwoman. She gets up at 3 o'clock in the morning and scrubs floors from 4 to 8. She walks to and from the big office building to save car fare. Is there not a prayer in her very attitude there on her knees?

Go into the police court.

There is a woman with faded face and hardened hands. Once she was pretty, but work and deprivation have robbed her, and because she no longer pleases her brute of a husband he beats her. She has had him arrested, but does not want to prosecute. In her face is the prayer of perplexity.

And yonder is a young fellow who in a drunken frenzy used a knife on his friend. Sorry enough now, in his every pose is the prayer of remorse.

That poor girl— She walks gayly enough tonight. But she has sold herself for bread, and could you look when, betimes, she sees herself as she is, you would witness a prayer of agony and despair.

And that mother's face— Can you not see in it as she fondly looks on her babes a prayer for their protection and future?

Prayers? See the attitude of the hopeless dweller of the slums; watch the tortured features of the pain racked hospital patient; peer into the heart of the suicide! If only we could read the hearts of sinning, suffering souls the world around—

What prayers! And some of them we can help to answer. We cannot pretend we do not see or hear the pleas. But—

Having seen so much and listened so long, are we becoming callous and uncaring?

If so what a chance we miss to help God answer some of these prayers!

Telephones in Asia.

It is estimated that in Asia there are about 170,000 telephones, mostly in Japan. The number in Singapore exceeds one thousand, and there are about as many in Siam and Cochin China.

UNSAFE CONDITIONS AT THE AUDITORIUM

MUCH DANGER FROM FIRE DURING LAST WEEK'S EXHIBIT HELD THERE.

WORRIED CHIEF KLEIN

Two Firemen Were on Duty There Afternoon and Evening Last Part of the Week.

That the fire hazard during the recent "Made in Janesville" exhibit held at the Auditorium all last week, was very great, was known but the fact was not commented upon at the time although all precautions possible to avert a serious blaze, had been started were taken and Chief Klein had two firemen on duty during the afternoon and evenings of the last two days of the exhibit keeping close watch.

In speaking of the affair Mr. Klein said, "When I inspected the building I found conditions so bad that I was fearful that should a fire start while crowds were inside, there would be an awful loss of life. I had been informed of this by the Mayor and he advised me to station a fireman in the building but I was not satisfied and placed two on duty. I felt that the only exit to the building was through the narrow entrance that the big door, which should have been left ready to open on an emergency, had been spiked fast shut. Later this was remedied but even at that had a serious fire happened, a panic ensued, it would have meant a loss of life that could not have been contemplated without horror."

"The flimsy decorations, the inefficient electric wiring, made it a most dangerous place for crowds. The aisles were narrow and congested most of the time and a panic would have meant something terrible. As it was there was one blaze there from a carelessly handled match which might have been serious but for the prompt work of Mr. Wortendyke. Such exhibits should be carefully planned and fire protection assured. The whole wiring system with the decorations used, was most dangerous and the city is lucky to have escaped a bad conflagration."

Mr. Klein was most anxious during the entire week and voiced his alarm to many. However as what precautions as could be taken at the eleventh hour were being taken, the affair was not made public. However, in view of the narrow escape it is possible that any future show will be more carefully inspected before opened to the public and all exits left ready for instant use and not blocked with booths and doors spiked shut.

Actual work of making the track connections between the Chicago & Northwestern and Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad company's tracks so as to transfer Northwestern trains across the railroad bridge on the St. Paul company's side, was begun today. Two crews of track workers and a work train furnished by the St. Paul railroad started the work this morning, one of the crews working at each end of the bridge. Heavy timbers and other equipment necessary for making the change have been hauled to the ends of the bridge, and it is expected the connections will be completed by tomorrow so that the work on the Northwestern side of the bridge may be started immediately.

Interlocking System. A new interlocking system for the government of trains at the crossing of the St. Paul and Northwestern tracks at Clinton has been installed and the old system of gates for blocking one track to allow the passage of a train over the other, has been taken out.

KILLED GREY FOX ON HUNTING TRIP

Animal Seen Rarely in This Section Killed by Harold Huston Two Miles West of City.

While out hunting in the woods about two miles west of this city, Harold Huston, a Janesville young man, shot and killed a grey fox. The animal is one that is very rare in this section, and an especially fine specimen of its kind, the fur being slightly speckled with red. A dog which Mr. Huston had taken with him on the hunt started the animal and chased it out of the brush toward Mr. Huston, who killed it by shooting it in the neck. The fur is in splendid condition, and will be made into a rug.

BRINGS NO TERROR TO MILADY'S HEART

The most feminine heart wouldn't think of leaping at sight of this little mouse—in fact, one can sit in perfect calmness while he gambles on the mouse's instep. For the mouse is merely embroidered on the suture stocking. The embroidery is done on the thread silk stocking with mouse colored silk and the effect is very natural and rather startling at first glimpse.

WEIRICK CASE WAS SETTLED TODAY BY PAYMENT OF CASH

DISTRICT ATTORNEY ANNOUNCES THAT SETTLEMENT HAS BEEN REACHED.

ENDS LONG LITIGATION

Started by County Board to Recover Fees During Last Eight Months Of Mr. Weirick's Term Of Office.

By the payment of $530 and the exchange of receipts, the famous case of the Board of Supervisors against Charles Weirick, former register of deeds has been settled. The action is one that has been replete with legal controversy and the settlement reached will save the long drawn out suit which was on the October calendar of the circuit court. The settlement was made in pursuance of a resolution by the county board authorizing the district attorney to accept $530 and exchange receipts with the defendant in the action.

When Mr. Weirick was serving his last term of office as register of deeds he refused to turn over the fees collected by his office taking them in lieu of salary for the eight months in question. The county board demanded that the sum of $1378.38 be returned to the county treasurer which was refused. Action was brought, taken through the courts to the supreme court and decided in Mr. Weirick's favor. The county board then prepared another suit to recover the money in question.

At the meeting of the county board in April, 1911, a settlement for $150 and exchange of receipts was offered by Mr. Weirick but refused and the suit, "law for Court" was filed and would have been tried at this term had not the settlement been effected. Mr. Weirick's contention in withholding the fees for the eight months has been sustained by court decisions and it is probable he would have won the suit had it come to trial.

WOMAN USHERS NEW FEATURE AT HORSE SHOW IN NEW YORK

Innovation Received With Approval by Men—Monument Unveiled to Titanic's Musicians.

New York, Nov. 18.—New York's greatest gala event, the annual Horse Show in Madison Square Garden, opened today to use the language of the press agent—"in a blaze of glory." Of course, an overwhelming majority of the patrons of the horse show do not care in the least for fine horses and horsemanship; their interest is entirely confined to the social side of the affair. They go to the show, because "Society" goes, because they want to see the members of the exclusive social circles, their fine clothes and jewels and, at the same time, exhibit their own finery. Still, there are quite a number of men and women who have enduring love for fine horses and an unflagging interest in the noble animal.

The entries are unusually large this year and all classes are well represented. Some of the finest horses in the country will be shown during the week, among them some noted former blue-ribbon winners. There are more women among the exhibitors this year than ever before, and the number of women who will appear in the ring to display their horses and their horsemanship will also far surpass the record of any former show. The suffragettes must be pleased with the growing importance of their sex in the riding and driving sport and everything connected with it.

For the first time in the history of New York annual show, women are employed as ushers. It is not known whether this innovation is one of the concessions to the women's rights agitation or merely an attractive advertising feature. It is safe to say, however, that the masculine patrons of the horse show will heartily approve of the innovation, whatever their views and convictions may be upon the subject of woman's suffrage and similar problems.

A few weeks ago some malicious person put a rumor in circulation that a girl had been found murdered in one of the locker rooms of a certain large department store in Brooklyn. The rumor went from mouth to mouth and obtained a wide circulation throughout the city. At last the story reached the owners of the store and they promptly began an investigation to trace the groundless and malicious rumor to its original source. Their efforts were futile and to put an end to the libelous rumor and clear up the mystery the management of the store appealed to the Kings County Grand Jury. The latter made every possible effort to find out who had started the rumor, but although hundreds of witnesses were heard not one of them seemed to know anything definite or tangible about the matter. After a thorough investigation the grand jury reported that the report was absolutely without foundation, but that the originator of the rumor could not be detected.

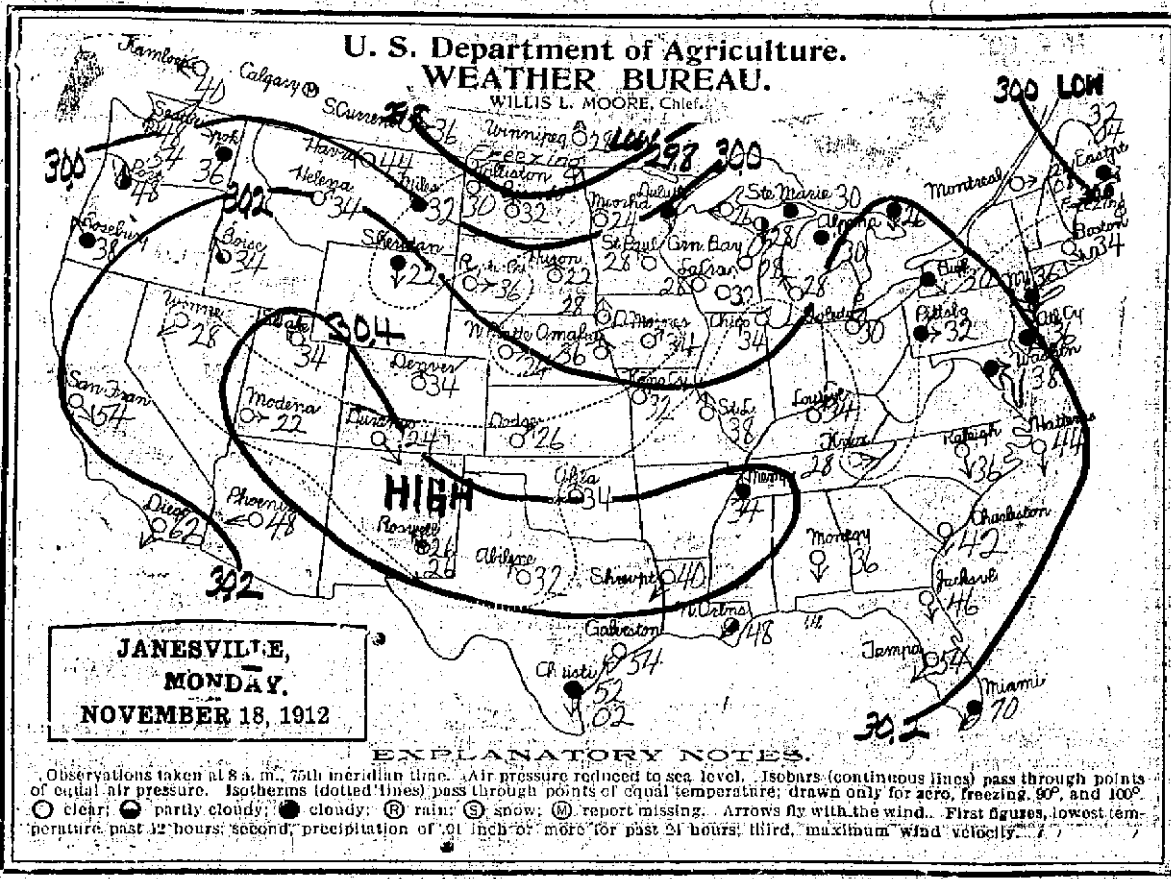

The various branches of the Young Men's Christian Association in New York and in neighboring cities and towns are frequently appealed to with requests to supply good and reliable men for various positions. It is the custom, whenever a request for help is sent to the association, to post a "Want notice" on the bulletin board of the respective branch, requesting applicants for the position to report to the secretary. It is created little short of a sensation at the headquarters of the Y. M. C. A. in Newark, N. J., the other day, when a notice appeared upon the bulletin board, stating that a real, "live" bartender was wanted and requesting applicants to report to the secretary. This is probably the first time that the Young Men's Christian Association has been called upon to supply a bartender.

The photographer of a moving picture concern boarded the Immigration Service tug "Emigrant" the other day with his camera to take a moving picture of the scenes on the trip to the Statue of Liberty and back. The tug was about half way between the Battery and Bedloe Island, when a cry of "man overboard" went up from the ferryboat Manhattan bound from the Battery to St. George, S. I. Every craft in the vicinity rushed to the scene of the supposed tragedy, boats were launched and a search was made for the victim of the tragedy. A hat, a coat and an overcoat were found floating on the water and were fished out by some of the boatmen. The search for the victim was continued for some time, but no body came to the surface and finally the search was given up as hopeless. During all that excitement the moving picture photographer continued to turn the crank of his machine, taking thousands of pictures of the constantly changing scenes upon the waters of the bay. There are some people who are firm in their belief that the harbor has become the grave of another suicide, but there are many others, equally firm in their conviction that the whole thing was nothing but a "plant" for the benefit of the moving picture photographer. Quien sabe?

A bronze tablet in memory of the seven ship's musicians who died playing when the steamer "Titanic" sank, was unveiled the other day by the Musical Protective Union at its clubhouse in the Yorkville Casino. The tablet, which is the work of Albert Weinert, is 30 by 24 inches, and shows a feminine figure, symbolic of Music, placing a wreath of oak leaves on an expanse of water broken by an iceberg. Beneath is the inscription: "A Tribute to the Bandmen of the Titanic. When the order was 'Each Man for Himself,' these heroes remained on board and played until the last."

Forty-seven churches and synagogues in the Gramercy district, bounded by Seventh and Twenty-fourth streets, Fifth Avenue and the East River, will observe Gramercy Neighborhood Day tomorrow and lay before their congregation plans whereby all may cooperate in an organized movement to improve the living conditions in the district.

When the day should arrive that will give to the women of New York the greatly desired and much longed for right to vote, there will be at least one woman who will be thoroughly familiar with the methods and

There is something finer than to do right against inclination, and that is to have an inclination to do right.

There is something nobler than reluctant obedience, and that is joyful obedience. The rank of virtue is not measured by its disagreeableness, but by its sweetness to the heart that loves it. The real test of character is joy. For what you rejoice in, that you love. And what you love, that you are like.—Henry van Dyke.

Expectant.

A man slightly under the influence of liquor strolled into the art gallery, wandered about aimlessly for a while and stationed himself in front of a painting of several mermaids half submerged in water. He regarded this picture intently for perhaps a half hour. Then he walked over to an attendant and said: "Shay, ole fellow, what time doesh tide go out, anyway?"

She Knew.

He—it is wonderful what mean things you girls can say to each other. She—Well, you'd say mean things too if you were a girl and knew all the other girls were saying mean things about you.

His Only Opportunity.

"So Banks is trying to break his late wife's will." "Yes, poor fellow, I guess it's the first time he ever had the chance to do it."—Baltimore American.

At The Theatre

"FRECKLES"
A. G. Delamater, the prominent producing manager of New York announces that on Monday November 18, he will present Neil Twomey's dramatization of Gene Stratton-Porter's "Freckles," at the Myers Theater.

A comparison of this wonderful nature story is impossible, for there has been nothing produced in all the history of the American stage just like "Freckles." It is distinctive, original; but of such absorbing interest that it is not difficult to know why the hundreds of thousands of readers have delighted in the story, nor why it has touched the palate of modern fiction readers. Neil Twomey has stuck faithfully to the text of Mrs. Porter's story; every character has been brought out in bold relief in the play, and where the picture was in phatic; the operetta soon became the talk of Berlin, and operettas composed by Franz Lehár and Leo Fall, scheduled to follow at the same playhouse, had to wait for production month after month until the sweeping vogue of "A Modern Eve" had run its course. The waltz song, "Goodbye, Everybody," (known in the German lyric as "Liebchen Lass Uns Tanzen") became the favorite of the year in Berlin, and within twelve weeks after the premiere, 120,000 copies had been sold.

Last fall Mort H. Sin, who has produced twelve musical comedies in Chicago during the past eight years, made a trip abroad, more to study the methods of the theatrical managers in Paris, London and Berlin than to secure foreign pieces for importation. Heretofore he had placed his the Thomas Orchestra of Chicago, in Symphony hall, an expert discriminating and appreciative of the conductor and his band. Such genuine, rattling and spontaneous applause has not been heard in Symphony hall, even for the cherished soloists of the Symphony concerts, for many a day. The conductor and the players and their public in Chicago may well plume themselves upon their reception here. It was enthusiastic and sincere; it had in it the just and discriminating appreciation that counts. For except the Symphony Orchestra and possibly the band of the western army, no other orchestra in the country from Chicago put all orchestras that have played here in recent years immediately and continuously out of mind.

"Mr. Stock conducts with elastic authority over a responsive band; his men play for him as though they liked and respected, as well as obeyed him. Clearly he does not 'fuss' them; clearly, as Thomas used to do, he does his rehearsing in rehearsals. Mr. Stock has a keen sense of color, accent and balance of tone. He reads Strauss' "Don Juan" with magnificent response to the splendors of its tonal coloring, the vividness of its musical characterization, the passionate ardor of the whole music. He was never merely expository in his playing of Brahms' Symphony. His Brahms is the full-blooded Brahms of our orchestral time. Above all, throughout the concert and whatever the piece, Mr. Stock kept the music in vital motion. It never stagnated, hesitated, halted, lapsed into the weariness of the lifeless, endless fluidity, the changeless eloquence of musical sound. Therein was his best, his highest attribute as a conductor."

—From the program book of the Detroit Orchestral Association, December 27, 1911.

The famous Theodore Thomas Orchestra will be heard at the Myers theatre, Monday, Nov. 25.

Fads and Fashion

New York, November 18.—Some of the most picturesque modes that may be seen in the shops and fashionable establishments are of the Directoire period. The short-waisted coat, with its deep collar and broad lapels, the frills of lace adorning the front and sleeves, the wide sash knotted at the side, the slashed-up skirt and the smart turned-up hat, with its stiff cockade—all have been revived to a marked extent in the models of the present season.

The tall woman should revel in this fact, for she appears at her best when attired in a Directoire gown. Great and dignity are contributed by these fashions. Materials are seen at their best when used to fashion an artistic costume of this period.

Not every one can afford frocks of now extremely fashionable silk velvet, so velveteen was manufactured as a cheaper substitute. It is lovely, and gives almost the same effect as silk velvet when made up. Velveteen and corduroy are used to fashion many smart frocks for street wear.

Plain colors are more frequently used for the velveteen models. They are effectively trimmed with fur, metallic laces, Persian or tapestry borders. Velveteen does not adapt itself so successfully to draping as do the softer velvets, so the skirts are usually plain or with pleated inserts. The bodices are in jumper effects with guimpes of lace or chiffon. Corduroys in the soft-finished qualities are extensively used. Frocks and coat suits are developed from the material and seem to find a ready sale.

Narrow bands of ermine, mink and other short-haired furs are used on the collars, sleeves and in trimming arrangements on the fronts of dressy waists. Fur bands are used in some cases in the upper section of the sleeve to hold the extra fullness or drapery in place, or in simple arrangements to produce a trimming effect. Other styles show the fur bands at the edge of the sleeve. The collar trimming usually takes the form of an edge around the Robespierre collar or the first Directoire collar which extends over the shoulder.

Strictly tailored waists have the characteristics of the mannish shirts in the high, soft, turn-over collar and cuffs and welted seams. Washable crepes de chene, heavy China silks and madras have narrow colored stripes on white groundwork, such as brown, Dutch and navy blue, wisteria purple and amber. Buttons of colored glass or amber composition are very effectively used for the front, pleat closing when they match the stripe of the silk. White pearl buttons are also used.

Soft-finished taffetas, messalines and satins are usually of the same color as the coat suit, as well as black. Many of these models are plain, but both striped and plaited patterns are also seen. The groundwork of Scotch plaids is usually blue, brown, green or black, with a plaided design in vivid shades of red, green, blue, or yellow. The stripes on these dark waists are in shades of red, purple, taupe, yellow and king blue.

Indications point to an increasing use of various flounce effects. One of the favored styles for developing the flounce skirt is the use of a slightly gathered skirt yoke in conjunction with two twenty-seven-inch flounces. Some of these gowns have the flounces in velvet, plush, lace, net, charmeuse or chiffon. The three-piece skirt has scant flounces about eighteen inches wide. They are cut in curved outline, the center front being shorter than the back measurement. These flounces are not held in as straight a line as formerly.

Flounces that border on the circular effect and form a ripple are making their appearance, but they are scant and cling closely to the figure. Accordion plaits are very good for these flounces, as they require no trimming, which would accentuate the broken lines, and they fit snugly to the figure that the straight effects are closely adhered to.

The new, rolling collars are, on the whole, more becoming than those on the Dutch order. Few women can wear successfully the collar line, following the base of the throat, but the collar that rolls away softly, leaving a V shape opening in front is quite generally becoming.

All of the collars in this class, Robespierre, Roi de Rome, Rauphin, etc., have quickly gained popularity and countless changes have been rung upon them. In some forms the Robespierre has been woefully commoized but in its more exclusive versions it has retained its prestige among the fashionable women.

Not all the collars rolling away from the throat belong under the Robespierre heading, though that classification has been made elastic enough to cover a host of shapes, that have not the remotest kinship with the original Robespierre model. The so-called Medici shapes have followed close upon the heels of the Robespierre fad and now one sees quantities of collars which, instead of rolling slightly and then turning down in deep points, flare out from the throat and roll at the edge, without turning down. Of course, in all such shapes there is some faint echo of the famous Medici collar, and so the name clings to all the variations on the theme.

The Directoire lines have not disappeared from modish neckwear, have indeed taken on a new lease of life, a rather spreading type of the high turndown or rolling Directoire collar having a place upon many of the coats and blouses, while the high turndown collar held close to the neck is much worn. This latter shape is usually held in place by a bow or strap across the front; but, like the close-fitting stock with Medici flare at the top and open front, this class of Directoire collar sometimes is stoutly boned or wired into place.

Chenille-dotted shadow veils are steadily forging to the front. Plain mesh effects are worn by a conservative few who do not admire the shadow veils.

The black or white Shetland veils are enjoying a continued popularity from last season, and the maple Shetlands are worn by many of the smartest dressers.

Accordion-plaited net is very much used for young girls' dresses. There are lovely little gowns, simply made of this material or of goffered pearl-white chiffon, into which is spliced a panel of shadow-lace, pleated to match.

A very evident trimming on the new neckwear is buckles. They are enameled and sometimes of fabric, but they give a smart finish to lace and linen.

Charming little fur hats are made to match the fur set worn. For instance, a hat of soft minkskin in tan or shanter style is simply trimmed with an egret.

Fur trimmings have also extended to children's fashions. The handsomest winter coats for children have fur-trimmed collars and cuffs.

FLORENCE FAIRBANKS.

The Greatest Woman.

Who was or is the greatest woman in all history? Two hundred Kansas teachers answered the question and with enthusiasm and unanimity the judges awarded the prize to the one who made this reply: "The wife of the farmer of moderate means who does her own cooking, washing, ironing, sewing, brings up a family of boys and girls to be useful members of society, and finds time for intellectual improvement."

Effect of Imagination.

A man condemned to death was promised that if he would spend the night in bed in which a cholera patient had died, and survived the experiment, his freedom would be given him. He spent the night in the bed and died the next day. But no patient had ever died in the bed, and the effect on the imagination and nerves of the condemned man really caused his death.

Unsatisfying Menu.

The young girls who work in the Paris shops have 50 centimes to spend for their midday meal, and when a charitable society inquired as to how the money was being spent, the following list was found to embody the average: Fried potatoes or sausage, 10 centimes; bread, 10 centimes; bonbons, 10 centimes; violets or other flowers, 20 centimes. The society no longer had any cause to wonder why the girls were undersized and ill-nourished.

Father's Hint.

The midnight stillness of the darkened parlor was punctuated with a crash just overhead. "Wha-wha-what was that, dud-dud-darling?" exclaimed the young man. "Merely father dropping a hint," she replied as she snuggled a little closer.

Gift With a String.

"Tis a strange species of generosity which requires a return infinitely more valuable than anything it could have bestowed."—Samuel Adams.

Will Destroy Moths.

It is said that the following will destroy moths, eggs and larvae in a closet. Place a brick on the floor of the closet and on this a tin or iron pan. Heat a brick until it becomes very hot and then put it in the pan. Four hot, strong vinegar on this brick, then close the door and keep it closed for 24 hours. The steam from the vinegar will kill any live thing that may be in the closet.

Lost a Customer.

Cashier—But there is not a cent here to pay this check of yours. Fair Customer—I am glad that you have confessed. If your bank is as hard up as that, you can give me what money I have here and I will take my account to a safer institution.—Pack.

Good Stickers.

There are some practical makeshifts for mullage. White of egg will be found quite as good as mullage for sealing a letter. Another substitute is a bit of cold boiled potato rubbed over the paper, the paper then being held in place firmly.

DELICATE TIRED WOMEN

This is an unnatural condition—a little rest each day and Scott's Emulsion after every meal gives nature the material to restore strength.

Scott's Emulsion is a strength-building, curative food and tonic to overcome weakness and fatigue—contains no alcohol or drug.

It doesn't stupefy the nerves, it feeds them.

Expectant and nursing mothers always need Scott's Emulsion.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 12-13

the minds eye of the reader, it will now be the actual line of vision. Delamater does nothing, by halves and so he has given carte blanche to scenic painters, electricians, carpenters and propertymen; a big expense, yes; but the education of the theatergoer is very complete and for success, demands stage equipment. The great "Lumberist Swamp," in which "Freckles" takes hold of life, and forms his nature friendships is realistically shown. It is a beautiful stage picture with the thickness of the swamp forming a dark massive background below, while above tower giant trees. A knowledge of perfect stage lighting makes this effect possible.

The coming of "Freckles" will be an event of the stage, just the same as it was an event in fiction; it is not a supposition it is a reality; the drama is now as great a success as is the story. It is playing to immense crowds everywhere.

"THE LITTLEST REBEL."

Mr. Marshall Farnum will be presented in Edward Peple's latest play, under the direction of A. H. Woods. "The Littlest Rebel," at the Myers theatre, Wednesday, November 20, "The Littlest Rebel" is a stirring, pathetic and humorous war-play the action of which takes place near Richmond towards the close of the civil war. It is not a play exploiting the love of the soldier of the north and the maid of the south. The love-interest centres in the paternal love of two men, one actuated naturally and the other by sympathy. There is no accounting for sexes at all; the author has shown that it is not this love that alone can aspire to deeds of heroism and elasticity of duty, but that an equally if not stronger motive exists when the chord of human paterfamiliness is touched. The grim background of war might be stripped away, and the story of the little girl who suffered with her father through many trying ordeals and finally saved his life through her plea to one of the greatest men in American history, would hold its human interest; but all the elements of the play adds to its appeal and serves to please all taste from the romantic sentimentalist to the lover of the thrilling and spectacular. Mr. Farnum has a play which offers ample opportunity to display his pleasing and interesting personality and histrionic abilities.

"TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY"

"Tess of the Storm Country" which will appear at Myers Theater on Thursday, November 28, Thanksgiving matinee and night is a dramatization of Grace Miller White's famous book of that name by Rupert Hughes, author of "Excuse Me," etc. It is a story of life along the shores of Lake Cayuga near Ithaca, New York, with a heroine from the fishing class. Against the electrically lit sky of the "storm country" standing by the mysterious waters of Lake Cayuga the author sketches "Tess" as a girl of beauty and superb coloring—a kind of beauty that, carried to its extreme power, may disrupt a kingdom. Tess loves, not a rude uncouth fisherman, but a university student of aristocratic traditions, suave speech and courteous manners—a man far above Tess socially. How love acts upon such a temperament—a temperament that makes of a woman an angel or an outcast according to the character of the man she loves—is the theme of the story. Tess is a character that will live in the memory long after the shallow, conventional heroines of society dramas have been forgotten.

"A MODERN EVE."

"A Modern Eve" which comes for the first time to Myers Theater on Wednesday evening, November 27, was first staged at the Jones theatre of Berlin, in August 1911, under the German title of "Die Moderne Eva." Its success was immediate and en-

"THE COBURN PLAYERS."

The Coburn Players, who will come to the Myers Theater on Saturday November 30, for one performance, are said to have productions that will show their dramatic powers at their very best. In their dramas, The Coburn Players have stirred New York and other large cities for a number of years. The mounting and costuming are said to be historically correct and of special interest. The play to be presented is Shakespeare's "Othello" which by many great scholars is deemed the masterpiece of the poet. It is one of the strongest performances given by the Coburn Players, and the work of Mr. Coburn as "Othello" and Mrs. Coburn as "Desdemona" is said to be unequalled by any actors of the present time.

It has been the usual custom for high-class Shakespearean companies to offer concessions in price to a select few. The Coburn Players prefer to show no favoritism, and will reduce their prices to the general public, making the scale from 25 cents to $1.00, boxes $1.50. This should be appreciated by all, for it gives a rare opportunity to see a great play magnificently presented, at prices that should be prohibitive to none.

THE THEODORE THOMAS ORCHESTRA IN THE EAST.

Patrons of these concerts, and friends of the Theodore Thomas orchestra, will be interested to know of the very great cordiality with which orchestra and conductor were received on their recent visit to New York, Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia. The first time the orchestra has visited these cities since Mr. Stock became conductor. The critics of the daily press were uniformly enthusiastic. The Thomas orchestra did not visit the East for the purpose of seeking unstinted praise, but as one of the greatest orchestras in the country, and to be placed, therefore, on the same level as the eastern orchestra, and intelligently considered from that standpoint by the critics.

Conductor and orchestra were both received and considered in this manner, and came out of the ordeal triumphant. The following brief excerpts, all that space will allow, from the eastern papers, will therefore be of special interest to the Detroit public which has recognized for years the dominant quality of this conductor and his band, and was among the earliest to acclaim both.

Interest naturally centers, first, in the opinion expressed by Boston, and especially the Boston Transcript, reputed to be the most exacting authority in the United States. Its critics give two columns of the most minute and discriminating analysis, which we regret we cannot reprint in full.

The Evening Chit-Chat

THE GOLDEN AGE

WHEN future students of history look back to the present epoch, I wonder if they won't call it the Golden Age.

No I don't mean at all in the sense of the old time Golden Ages. Not the Golden Age of achievement or happiness, but the age of gold worship.

The age when anyone is considered "queer" if he doesn't think success and wealth are synonymous.

The age when the "best society" is generally accepted as meaning the people with the best bank accounts, irrespective of whether they have any breeding, morals or intelligence.

Above all things the age when no conversation between average people lasts more than five minutes without one party or the other bringing in some reference to his possessions, or his friends' possessions, or the possessions he used to have or hopes to have.

At a house where I once took my breakfast one woman used to regularly regale the breakfasters with remarks like these:

"Well, I'm going to take my husband's twenty dollar Panama up to town to be re-blocked."

"What do you think, my husband's forty-five dollar raincoat has worn through in two places, and he has only had it a year!"

"Does anyone know of a good place to have rings reset? I am so afraid of the jeweler's substituting inferior stones. You know I have to care for an account of my twenty-five hundred dollar emerald."

This woman was such a flagrant worshiper of the golden calf that the rest of the boarders used to joke about the twenty dollar Panama and the forty-five dollar raincoat, etc. And yet I noticed that, though we were somewhat more subtle about it, we also were prone to insinuate similar references to our possessions into the conversation.

A young man from New York married a girl whose home was in Bermuda, and on all the wedding presents which were sent there he had to pay duty. So every time the subject of customs came up he would tell his experiences and enumerate the gifts.

"There was a silver service that must have cost at least five hundred," he would say, "and a set of hand-painted china that was worth between three and four hundred—etc., etc." We used to wonder how the values he gave us compared with those he quoted to the customs inspector.

Now this man pretended to be down on the tariff. He should have been grateful to it. Just think of the chances it gave him to blow about those gifts!

"How prosperous Mr. A. looks," I heard one woman say to another: "does he make a great deal of money?"

"No, he doesn't," said the other woman, "but he manages to look as if he did. That's the next best thing, isn't it?"

To future students of the Golden Age I recommend this motto of the age as the best key to it:

"To have money or to appear to have it is the whole duty of man."

varied at the time, the manner of preparing and serving can. It can never be served in too tempting a manner.

In the first place have the patient comfortable to receive the tray, and this should be one which does not rest on the bed nor the lap, giving undue excitement, fearing things will upset and spill. Linen, glass and china, should be the prettiest in the house and that varied as much as possible. A flower on the tray. I knew a little girl who walked blocks every Sunday morning for an American Beauty rosebush to put on the breakfast tray for her father who was ill. It was his favorite flower. Hot things, hot, and cold things cold. Do not forget things, but look after every detail of service. This will make the simplest meal a pleasure.

The following are a few individual dishes or preparations which may be given under direction:

Pineapple Egg Nog.
Beat slightly one fresh egg, add two tablespoonsfuls of water, two of fresh pineapple juice, two of lemon juice, strain over shaved ice and sweetener to taste. Any of the fruit syrups which most every housekeeper now makes, such as lemon, pineapple, currant, orange, etc., are fine for such drinks.

Another change is blending three-fourths of a cup of lemonade—not too sweet, with one-fourth of grape juice. Pour over shaved ice.

Raw white of egg may be served by putting into a glass two table-spoonfuls of lemon, orange or grape juice. Add the stiffly beaten white and a little shaved ice. Sprinkle a little bit of sugar and a bit of nutmeg over the top and serve.

Koumiss.
Take one quart of fresh sweet milk, heat until lukewarm; add to it one-third of a compressed yeast cake dissolved in a little of milk and one teaspoonful of sugar. Put the mixture into perfectly sterilized bottles, fill to the neck and fasten with the patent cork. Let them stand for twelve hours where the temperature is about sixty-eight degrees; then put on ice, lying down or upside down for twenty-four hours. This is an excellent form of serving milk where there is any intestinal difficulty.

Lemonade.
Squeeze the juice of one large lemon into a bowl. Put in two level tablespoonfuls of sugar and pour on one and one-fourth cups of boiling water. Strain and set on ice to cool. Serve with a little shaved ice and a thin slice of lemon. Vary with a few sprigs of mint.

Wine Jelly.
Granulated gelatin, two teaspoonfuls; cold water, two tablespoonfuls; sherry wine, two tablespoonfuls.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff; that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

The Kitchen Cabinet

EMERSON says: "I know no such unquestionable badge and ensign of a sovereign mind, as that tenacity of purpose which, through all changes of companions or parties or fortune, changes never, bats no lot of heart or hope, but waries out opposition and arrives at its port."

DAINTIES FOR CHILDREN'S PARTIES.

One of the things to guard against in serving children is that they must have no very rich food, or very little. Children are exceedingly fond of ice cream, and if not too rich or served in too large quantities, it is not harmful.

Sweet sandwiches, marguerites and fruits of all kinds make enough variety to please the small people, with no after ill effects.

Stewed prunes, mixed and chopped with nuts and used for a sandwich filling, are most appetizing. Cut them in different shapes, as often the appearance will decide the liking or not for the food. Cut in crescents, hearts, finger size or in circles; placed on a pretty plate, they will appeal to the taste of most any child.

Sponge cakes baked in gem pans and filled, when cold, with whipped cream which has been sweetened and flavored, are always a delight to young or old.

A delicious dessert for children, as well as a food of high value, are figs and raisins stewed together. The fruits should be served cold, with brown bread and butter. If an extra rich and elegant dish is desired, add whipped cream.

A marshmallow dropped in the cup of cocoa takes the place of cream and is enjoyed by the little people.

Meringue cakes may be made at home by whipping white of egg and sugar into cup shapes and baking. Serve these filled with ice cream, garnished with candied cherries.

Another nice dessert is chopped marshmallows, a few nuts and sweetened whipped cream.

Lemon jelly, or any gelatin jelly, with marshmallows stirred in it and molded makes an attractive and effective pudding.

A half of a peach or pear, with whipped cream and a sprinkling of chopped nuts, with nut bread wafers, is a most satisfying dessert.

Hot Scotch scones split and spread with butter and orange marmalade are delicious sandwiches which take the place of cake.

Accentuating Plant Characters.
It has been found that under red light (light through red glass) plants become more robust than in any other. They also become more pronounced in their chief characters—the leafy plant becomes more leafy, all shades of green become more pronounced, the sensitive plant more sensitive and all in every way become highly specialized.

MANY FOODS NOT NEEDED FOR VARIETY OF FOOD ELEMENTS.

Every article of food contains all the fourteen elements required for perfect nutrition, with a few exceptions. These elements are contained in widely different proportions in the different foods. Some contain too much albumen in proportion to the other elements, others too much starch and others too much fat. An excess of albumen, as in eggs, meat, beans and some nuts is the most undesirable combination, because an excess of albumen imposes a severe strain upon the digestive and eliminative organs for its elimination, and especially where there is weakness of the kidneys, as in Bright's disease. Entire wheat contains all the elements of nutrition in nearly the same proportions as they are found in the adult body, so that it is regarded as the nearest to the perfect food for the adult, its only deficiency being fat, and the same is true of the other cereals and of unpolished rice. So that if one were to choose a ration that would give the best balance of the nutritive elements it would not be a carefully compounded meal, but a monodiet of whole wheat bread with butter or of unpolished rice with cream or of walnuts and raisins or bananas and peanuts (unroasted).

Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

The Diary of Mistress Pepys, A. D. 1912

9 TH.—Today comes my husband and says we shall go to a State called California, which is far in the West. At which I am much perturbed, having in mind the inconveniences of the great journey.

For a man thinketh not of what it means to a woman to travel. For what with her hair to do and her dress to keep of a sufficient freshness it is truly a great trouble. For though it vexes my husband that I wear not my natural locks, I know it would vex him more if I did, such is the inconsistency of man. And when I hear the tales of dressing in these coaches, which now that I am going, all my friends are telling me, I am mightily disturbed.

But God wot! a man will have his way! And he is in high spirits preparing, having but to put things into one bag, and having heard much of this country. And since I cannot persuade him of a different mind, I will myself make ready.

12th.—I find the journey not so wearisome as I did fear, for the coaches are all very fine, with much plush and great windows and a very merry company, who play cards and eat sweets, quite as though they were in their homes and not flying across the land at a fearsome rate.

I looked about me for a place to sleep, but saw none; and was thinking with great weariness of the sitting up all night, when the black man began letting down the coach from the top, and raising it from the bottom, and to my much astonishment, we all got into little cupboards and lay on a shelf with a curtain in front.

As I lay on my shelf and looked out the window, I seemed to be flying through the clouds, and I imagined I was on a journey to the moon; and so, dropped asleep, and dreamed I had arrived at the station in the moon, and the people were amazing white and gaseous, and there was no sound whatever, and the light was blue, and the food was without savour and seemed not to fill one; and just then, I heard some one say, "We'll be at Dubols in half an hour." And there I was, back on my shelf in the little cupboard and it was beginning to get daylight. And so, in a short time to the dressing room, where were many others, and one in state before the mirror, fixing her hair most carefully with braids, as is the fashion, and the others looking with great indignation at her slowness. Thence to table, where was much silver and linen and divers kinds of food, quite as though the shops were next door, which puzzled me mightily, seeing we are in a desert-land and stop for naught. And so at last to our journey's end, which now that I am here, I must say is a very wonderful place, and I would that all the world might see this country with its blue sky and its golden fruits and its flowers which do grow everywhere, in the streets, over the houses, on the walls, and up the trees, until everything is garlanded with bloom.

15th.—Up betimes and to the arranging of my house, which is here called a bungalow and which to me is very strange, all the rooms being on one floor, and no stairs whatever. But it doth convenience me mightily, and I find not the wearisomeness of going up and down that aforesaid I knew. For I would no sooner be up, than some one would knock below. And when I was down, I would be in need of something above. And so it was the whole day, going back and forth, until I found myself at night with great fatigue.

Also to my astonishment, I find much furniture built fast to the house, which in my mind I have not yet decided whether I prefer or not. For I like sometimes to move the furniture about, which is a great diversion. But the women here are, methinks, odd creatures. They like not such things. They assemble themselves together, and discourse upon such strange topics as referendum and tariff and primaries and God knows what. Mayhap I will come to do the same myself, for already I feel a strange stirring in my blood. But I doubt me, if my husband will approve of such conduct.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

The Table.

Florida Salad—Cut tops from stems of green peppers, remove seeds, refill with grapefruit, peeled and cut in cubes, the tenderest of celery cut into small pieces, and chopped almonds, allowing twice as much grapefruit as celery and one-third as much of nuts as grapefruit. Arrange in nests of lettuce-leaves and serve mayonnaise dressing.

Cook pumpkins that you think you can't keep very long, add a little salt and can in glass cans; they will keep till next summer and will be as good as fresh. When opening, drain off the water, stew dry, mash and take a tin cup or pint of pumpkin for three pies, one cup sugar, pinch of nutmeg, one of ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, three level tablespoons flour mixed with sugar, three eggs and one quart milk; will make three large pies.

Breaded Sausage—Wipe sausage dry, dip in egg and bread crumbs; put in frying basket, fry 10 minutes. Serve with toasted bread and parsley.

Graham Gems—Ore and one-half cups graham flour, one tablespoon sugar, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon melted butter, three-fourths cup milk. Mix and sift all dry ingredients, add milk and melted butter. Bake in gems tins about 25 minutes. I have tried these and found them very good.

To Make Good Bread.

For long I have heard that too many potatoes spoil bread. I've been experimenting for several weeks and find that inclosed recipe makes lovely bread with our common home-ground wheat flour.

I believe the difficulty has been in using the water in which potatoes have been boiled. This I throw away. Boil three pints of pared potatoes.

drain, throw away the water, mash carefully (don't put through a colander). Put water enough on potatoes to make them like mush when taken from the pot. When cold enough add one good yeast cake.

Let stand over night, mix rather stiff, let rise, make into loaves and bake in pans, while rising, with pan or crock. When quite light bake well—usually about an hour.

FIFTY ARE ENROLLED IN EVENING SCHOOL

LARGE NUMBER HAVE ALREADY NOTIFIED SUPERINTENDENT THAT THEY WILL EN- TER.

OPENS TUESDAY NIGHT

When Further Names Will Be Re- ceived for the Various Branches —Regular Classes Begin Thursday.

Over fifty students, adults over sixteen years of age not attending the day school, have already enrolled to enter the evening industrial school which will open on Tuesday evening of this week. Regular classes will begin Thursday night. Circulars have been sent out to the various factories and signs, and to individuals in the canvass for students. In order to insure a class in any one subject ten students must be enrolled. Thirty have enrolled in the course in dressmaking and fourteen in dressmaking, but there are the only classes named thus far. If six more are secured there will be a class in shorthand. The status of the evening school is shown in a communication from Supt. C. Buell: Editor Gazette: I again avail myself of your kind invitation to use the columns of your paper to explain the work contemplated in our free evening school. Tuesday evening, Nov. 19, will be enrollment night at the night school. Those men or women over sixteen years of age who desire to join any of the classes should enroll at that time if they have not already sent in their names. It will require the names of at least ten persons who will attend a class before a teacher will be engaged to teach that subject. At present the positive enrollment in the various subjects is as follows:

English for foreigners, 9; dressmaking, 14; shorthand and typewriting, 4; home cooking, 2; mechanical drawing, 1; electricity, 1; plain sewing, 2; salesmanship, 30; with more than twice that number who have orally expressed their intentions of joining. If any of the Gazette readers know of one or more foreigners who would care to learn to read and write the English language, a fine service could be rendered them by securing their enrollment in this class. Only one more is needed to assure the formation of the class. A class in dressmaking is already assured. The class in cooking for those who do any family cooking would probably derive as much practical benefit from the school as any of the others attending. Are there any young married women, maidens or others who cook who would like to learn new ways, new recipes, or how to cook new dishes, or vary the daily meals and learn economical methods of managing the kitchen. If so, the cooking school is at their service. The other departments too are ready to help any of the citizens of Janesville who could profit by this evening school work. Kindly send in names and subject you desire to study at once, or call at the high school building any time in the day or on Tuesday evening from eight to nine thirty which is enrollment evening. Classes will start Thursday evening, Nov. 21. H. C. Buell, Supt.

SIDEWALK KETCHES.

SHOPPING.

(By Howard L. Rana.)

SHOPPING is a feminine pastime which prevents saleswomen from growing stout on account of lack of exercise. It has an undying charm for the woman who does not intend to buy anything, but who would be willing to look at everything up to the twelfth floor, so that she will know what to get when her black taffeta rusts out. Shopping requires undaunted courage, a nose for bargains and the physique of a Roman gladiator. A slight, fragile woman will start out in the morning, after a hearty breakfast on a poached egg and yomp through a department store for eighteen miles without slowing up at the curves, returning home for lunch with her back hair just where she put it when she got up and as fresh as a daisy. Then she will think of something she wanted to match and go back and run it down after a four hours search, securing just enough exercise to put her in trim for the theatre. If a man would try that stunt, he would cave in at the ankles, knees, waist line and collar bone before he had gotten around to the glove counter.

The demands of shopping are becoming so strenuous that a great many women prepared for bargain day sales by taking a course in Swedish gymnastics and practising several hours a day on the horizontal bar. They are then able to buck the line leading up to the ribbon counter without drawing anything but a few minor contusions.

Men do not know how to shop and are taken advantage of by designing saleswomen, who love a shining mark. When a man goes in to buy a dress pattern for his wife, he is just as liable to come out with ten yards of roller towel as anything else. Many a husband has carried home three or four dresses for his wife to try on, and found that the largest size was about right for a girl of 14 years.

Shopping is very popular in the large cities, where a woman can save 4 cents on a quarter's worth of prunes by laying out 10 cents for car fare, $1.75 for lunch and four hours of time. On bargain days there should be added in one pair of willow plumes and a doctor's bill.

WONDERFUL POWER IN THE LOVE OF JESUS

SO DECLARED REV. JOHN MCKINNEY IN SERMON AT CHRIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

IT TRANSFORMS LIVES

And is the Magic Touch Which Turns the Hearts of Men and Women to Righteousness and Christian Living.

That the love of Jesus Christ is the magic touch which turns the hearts of men and women to righteousness, was the keynote of the morning sermon at Christ Episcopal church yesterday morning by the Rev. John McKinney. His text was taken from the thirty-first through the thirty-fourth verses of the fourth chapter of the gospel of St. John.

In his opening remarks, the pastor retold the story of Jesus meeting the Samaritan woman at the well and how he had revealed to her three great secrets: the answers to which men had been seeking for thousands of years. The first of these was: What rest or peace there was for the weary or sin-stricken soul; the second, that God knows the hearts of all His children; and the third, how His children might worship Him.

These are not secrets to us, said the pastor, because these things have been known for thousands of years, but for thousands of years before that time they had never been revealed to men. None could answer the questions that men sought answers for until this Great Revealer came. In these days we might expect the coming of such a man would be announced to the world in a more spectacular way; that some herald would go out and tell of his coming. We can imagine the modern way of advertising, spectacular, with big headlines in the newspapers and other ways of attracting the attention of the people. But what a heed in these days is to go back to the well curb in Samaria and learn to teach in the quiet way in which the Saviour spoke to this woman. He told her of the water that, whoever drinketh shall not thirst; he told her of the wickedness of her own life, and she marvelled and returning to the city, told the men of the city that the Messiah had come.

Later when the disciples returned to Him and urged him to eat, Jesus said: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." It is supposed that when Jesus said these words, He was not a human being, said Rev. McKinney. He did not enter into humanity. He was born of the Virgin and entered into all conditions of human life, but here was something that fed, not His physical manhood, but His spiritual well-being.

These words of Jesus brought an awakening to the woman, and the revelation made to her is what has been revealed to the world, that if we wish we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous. The man who speaks is the meat, the spiritual side, side giving rest and peace to the men and women of the world. Jesus revealed to the men and women of Samaria the secrets of God. If God then was possessed of all-seeing eyes, He possesses that faculty as much today. Christ is alive forevermore and conquers Death and Sin, and no man can hide his sins and iniquity from Christ. How perfectly he understands men.

How then is God worshipped? Some criticize our ritual, said the speaker, saying that we have the same prayers and services year after year, but I find there is little difference in the matter of worship between this church and those who have no ritual at all. And if these prayers are offered in truth and in sincerity, why should they not be acceptable to God. We need to interpret them in our own minds, lives and hearts, and go and tell of the wonderful things God has done for us.

Attendance at one or two services at the church a week is not religion, said the pastor, but selfishness, because the persons who do so do not go to glorify God or to glorify themselves and have not experienced the love of God. The only way anything can be accomplished is by a concentration of efforts to teach some life, and it must be done in spirit and in truth. It is only through the magic love of God that the hearts of men and women are turning today to Him.

Telling the Age of a Horse. The age of a horse may be judged by the appearance of the teeth because on the upper surface of the incisors a hollow is to be seen in the young tooth, which not extending through the whole substance, naturally wears out with the wear of the tooth, and as a considerable degree of regularity occurs in the wearing away in all horses, it has been adopted as a general criterion of age.

That "SKUNKY" Taste in Some Beers is caused by the action of Light.

This is the deliberate opinion of no less an authority than Philip Dreeschbach, German expert and scientist in the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology. He says:

"Beer acted upon by light soon takes up the very disagreeable, so-called 'light taste,' and also a repulsive skunk-like odor. Beer so affected is offensive to the palate of most consumers, and there is probably nothing that will influence them more against any brand of bottled beer than to have once tasted beer possessing this 'light taste' to a marked degree. The presence of this defect, however, is not always the bottler's fault, as the consumer himself very often lets the beer stand in the light. But the consequences must usually be borne by the bottler."

Schlitz is sold in Brown Bottles to protect its purity from the brewery to your glass.

In our brewery we spend more in purity—in time, in skill and in money—than any other cost.

DINNER STORIES

Down in Georgia a negro who had his life insured for several hundred dollars died and left the money to his widow. She immediately bought herself a very elaborate mourning outfit.

Showing her purchase to her friend, she was very particular in going into detail as to the prices and all incidental particulars. Her friend was very much impressed, and remarked: "Them sho' is fine clo'es, but befo' Heaven, what is you goin' to do wid all dis black underwear?"

The bereaved one sighed: "Chile, when I mou'n I mou'n."

When Charles A. Cotterill was making an automobile tour in northwest Ohio not a long time ago with a member of Congress, the machine got stuck in the mud, and the party invaded a farmer's house, with a request for dinner.

"I don't know you," said the Congressman to the farmer, "and you don't know me, but you elected me to Congress, and now I want you to give up a dinner."

The farmer and his wife furnished an elaborate meal, and it was when "Are you a party boss?" "Certainly not," replied the local despot. "I simply tell the boys how I am going to vote, and then tell them to vote as they please. But heaven help them if they don't please to vote the way I do."

Not a Time to Be Hasty.

"Father, our daughter is being courted by a poet," "Is that so, mother?" "I'll kick him out." "Not so fast. Investigate first and find out whether he works for a magazine or for a breakfast food factory."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

the repast was half over that the countryman, with a worried look, exclaimed to his wife: "Mommie, you didn't give Mr. Cotterill a napkin."

"Oh, yes," said Cotterill quickly, "here it is," and he took it out of his lap and held it up for all to see. "Oh! apologized the farmer, "I thought you didn't have none because you didn't have it on."

The Lady of the Mount

by FREDERIC S. ISNAM
AUTHOR OF "THE STROLLERS" UNDER THE ROCKS
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WATERS

Her ladyship! the fire leaped wildly, as laughing at fate's foolish prank. Her life for his! What irony! If she had betrayed him? "If?" His laugh crushed, possibility for supposition; but almost at once itself died away! Indissolubly associated with the thought, a scene in a dungeon must needs recur; her denials; the touch of a hand; the appeal of light fingers thrust through the bars! Why? The questions he had asked then, were reiterated now; the hand that had gripped hers opened, closed; once more he seemed to see the steadfast, unswerving eyes; once more seemed to read in their depths, "Believe!"

The pine branches continued to crackle as with merriment; but his gaze was somber. How glad she must have been to see the end of her captivity! The sudden leaping of yonder flame was like the quick, bright flush that had mantled her cheek at sight of her liege lord to be! They should have arrived at the Mount ere now; about this time were entering the gates! He could see her, the Marquis at her side—

A sudden sharp detonation afar disrupted the picture. Other explosions followed, like volleys of muskets; and, springing to the window, the Black Seigneur looked toward the Mount; from it, flashes of light gleamed and glistened. Then the loud report of a cannon reverberated in the distance.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Attack on the Mount.

The rock loomed black before them, as the troopers, escorting the Governor's daughter, rode up to the Mount. Entering the town, at its base, dark walls on either side of them shut out the broad map of the heavens and left but a narrow open space above; few lights were visible, so that many of the houses seemed tenanted; even at the tavern, unwonted stillness prevailed. Apparently was the return well-timed; in twisting street and tortuous byway, where hostile faces had been prone to frown upon the soldiers of his Excellency, emerging from, or ascending to, the stronghold of the summit, now only chill drafts of air swept down to greet them; passed on with shrill whisperings, and died away in the distance.

Nearing the massive portals that opened wide into his Excellency's realm, my lady suppressed a shiver; but the Marquis, in a low tone, ventured to jest on the depressing and melancholy aspect of the Mount, at that hour. To these light remarks she returned no answer, and he had just begun to rally her on a certain quietness of spirits, apparent on the beach and irreconcilable with the circumstances of the moment, when a sharp exclamation fell from the girl's lips.

In front of them, between the soldiers and the entrance to that upper part of the Mount, many dark forms had suddenly darted forth; at the same time from near-by houses came unmistakable sounds of life and ac-point from which the town unfolded itself in the starlight and flicker of lamps, he sought, as best he might, to acquaint himself further with the situation; to judge the numbers of the assailants and the extent of their preparations.

The scene that met his eyes was not so reassuring as he had expected; that which until now he had considered but a spasmodic outbreak of a comparatively few townspeople, excited by the news of the Bastille and bent on any petty mischief, resolved itself into more than an orderless, desultory uprising. To his startled gaze the rock, like an ant-hill disturbed, seemed swarming with life. Even as he peered down, new relays of men poured upward from the dark byways to the reinforcement of those already gathered at the portals, and, for the first time, his confidence, bred of contempt for the commonality, became slightly shaken.

Fate, which had struck him sharply in the capture of his daughter and the enforced negotiations leading to the release of one he would have dealt with after his own fashion,

"They Will Not Spare You!"

now gripped him closer. What did it portend? Whence came all these people?

Not all of them from the immediate neighborhood! Voices, among the assailants, had called out in what was surely the Parisian dialect of the rabble; here to propagate the revolution; extend the circle of flame! And they had seen that arms were not wanting! Muskets, pikes, swords, must have been kept concealed for some time in the town at the base of the Mount or on the shore. In his mind's eye, too late perhaps, his Excellency could see now how the assault had long been planned, how all these people had only been waiting. For what? The opportunity afforded by a treacherous word! Spoken by whom?

But a moment these reflections surged through his brain; an instant, and his gaze swung around, at towers—turrets—as a magician might apprehensively survey a fabulous architectural creation, handiwork of his dark craft, threatened, through an influence beyond his control, with destruction; then with a quick start, his Excellency wheeled; walked toward the stairway. About to descend, the sight of a figure coming up, caused him, however, to pause; in the flare of the light below, something in the manner of the man's advance impressed the governor as peculiar.

"Mon pere! Mon pere!" she cried eagerly, divining his face in the light of lamps on that side of the wall. He answered only with a laconic command to go at once to the palace; and, regarding his features, tragically appealing to her at the moment—so strange and different they seemed!—she prepared to obey. But ere turning, "You think the soldiers can hold the gate?" she asked.

"Yes; yes!" he replied sharply, as if annoyed at the question; "But if—"

"There is no 'if!'" said the Governor, and as the girl rode away, his look, hard, steady, shifting to the soldiers, made quick mental note; they were holding the gates. Satisfied with the front his men presented, and, delivering a few brief orders to the commandant whose valor in rallying his forces had been commendable, his Excellency walked toward the great stairway leading up to the open space near the church. Arrived at this high

When you have anything to sell let the people know it through the want ads.

The movements of this person, who was under-sized, wiry, were agile and catlike; first would he stop, look around him and listen; afterward spring forward, a few steps as not quite sure of his course. But still he came on, keeping as closely as might be to the cover of the shadows, until a growing impression he had seen the fellow before resolved itself into positiveness in his Excellency's mind. And with the conviction and a sudden remembrance of the place and the character of their previous meeting, a definite disinclination to encountering the figure on the stairs caused the Governor abruptly to draw into the entrance of the church. There, concealed, impatiently he waited for the man to pass on, thus affording him the opportunity to slip by and return to the gate.

Meanwhile, the Lady Elise had repaired to the palace; a prey to harassing doubts her father's words had failed to remove, she listened to the sounds of the strife she no longer saw. But that she wished to obey her father unquestioningly now—perhaps, a supreme moment for both of them!—she could not have remained where she was. Never had the palace looked so blank and deserted; she rang her bell; no one answered. The servants had apparently all left—gone, it might be, to look down on and behold this guerre—a last moment near the gates. Or, perhaps, had they all, except the old nurse, fled from the palace, never to return?

As she asked herself these questions, in the distance the noise of the conflict grew louder; the shouts of the people more distinct, nearer! With a sudden premonition of disaster close at hand, the desire to see what was happening—to know the worst—seized her. No longer could she remain in her apartments; she must return to the ramparts; to her father; and then it need be—The thought drove some of the color from her cheek, but in a moment her braver instincts spoke; there awoke within her the courage and spirit of her Norman ancestry.

Pale, yet determined, she hastened down the long, dimly lighted corridor, and was nearing the door leading to the street when it suddenly opened and a man, tall and dark, showing in his appearance many signs of the fray, stepped in. At sight of her a quick exclamation fell from his lips; his bold, anxious eyes lighted. "My Lady!"

"You!" Her startled glance met his. "I heard the firing; hastened to the Mount—here! I trust not too late!"

"Too late!" she repeated wildly. "Where else should the Black Seigneur be than here, at the Mount—at such a moment!"

"True!" he returned quietly. "Where else?"

She noted not the accent; behind him, through the open space a bright fork of flame, in the direction of the soldiers' barracks, shot into the air, and, at the same time, she saw that the officers' quarters and out-buildings were ablaze. The knowledge of what it meant—that her apprehensions had been realized, sent a shudder through her, and quickly as the door closed, shutting out the sight, she ran toward the threshold, one thought in her mind.

her father, and where she had last seen him! That she was seized, held, restrained, seemed but a natural, though terrible, incident of the moment.

"Pardon me, Lady! In a moment they will be here, and they will not spare you! Your father is not at the gate; he left before the soldiers gave way! Believe me, or not—it is the truth! As true as that, if you go out, they will kill you!"

And did he not want that; why else was he here? The young man's face darkened; he made an impatient gesture. They were but wasting time; already were the people close without; one of the assailants, a woman, had been shot in the assault; the others? Her Ladyship would understand; if she wished to save herself! His tones vibrated with strange eagerness. The palace had a rear entrance, of course? Then had they better flee upward to some place of concealment, and later when the people were concerned most in pillage, endeavor to find a way to leave the Mount. After that, it would be easy; his ship was waiting—Her wild words interrupted; her father—she would go only to him! She would never leave him now! (To be continued.)

HUNDRED YEAR CLUBS

Believe Life May Be Prolonged. Men who are devoting their lives to the study of longevity believe that in days to come a man of ninety will be in his prime, and old age will begin long past a hundred years.

Scientists have proved that the simple life, temperate habits, exercise, and an active mind are essential to a long and happy life.

When the blood gets thin and sluggish and creeps lazily through the veins, and the arteries begin to harden, there is nothing that will enrich the blood, improve the circulation and restore strength to every back-sliding organ in the body so quickly as our delicious cod liver and iron tonic Vinol. Here is proof.

Mrs. Michael Bloom of Lewiston, Pa., at 33 years of age was so weak she had to be wheeled around in an invalid's chair—she writes that after taking a few bottles of Vinol she could take long walks and do her household work. That shows how Vinol strengthens old people.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Nov. 18, 1872—Last Night's Temperance Gathering: The spacious audience room of the Congregational church was filled with people last night and there was a gratifying enthusiasm over the subject of temperance, the discussion of which was the object of the gathering. Mayor Sutherland presided and short religious exercises by Revs. Hurdley, Bakeman and Smith, with singing by the choir, preceded the introduction of the topic of the evening. Short speeches were made by Hon. J. B. Cassaday, M. M. Phelps, Hon. Willard Merrill, Dr. J. B. Whiting, Rev. Lyman Whiting and Mayor Sutherland, in which they pleaded earnestly with their hearers for the reform so greatly needed in our city. Their remarks were frequently applauded with an earnestness which betokened a complete sympathy between the audience and the speakers. The meeting closed with a benediction by the Rev. William Goodall, one of the pioneer reformers of our country. It is probable that other similar gatherings will follow this successful inaugural meeting, and that, as the interest of the people is aroused, something more potent than words will be brought into the conflict.

Epizooty:—Janesville Horses Afflicted: The horse disease has prevailed for some time in our vicinity, and a few straggling cases have been noted in our city, but the absence of a general visitation had induced the owners of equine stock to hope that Janesville might escape with only a few sick horses. Nevertheless they have watched with no little anxiety, and have been preparing for the worst by putting their horses in a condition to withstand the attacks of the disease, should it make its presence manifest. Nor were their fears groundless. An inspection of the leading stables this morning convinces us that the epizootic is here in force. Most of the horses now suffering in the city were attacked with the disease on yesterday. It affected them all alike and about the same time and it is probable that they will all recover together.

And so I started singing as round the store I sped, and Bulger soon was fingering steel bootjacks at my head. "Cut out that silly howling! When folks come to the store, they hear your caterwauling, and go, to come no more!" And then I tried to whistle, to show how glad I was, and Wax (who's mostly gristle) just soaked me on the jaws. IT'S RISKY

IT'S A BIG RISK to hold an auction sale unless it is well advertised. You put up $2000 worth of property for sale, maybe it will bring $2000; maybe $1500; maybe less. It's up to you. It all depends upon how well you advertise it. One that is thoroughly advertised cannot help but be a success. Almost every sale that is advertised in the Gazette brings more than the proprietor expected. You can save a few dollars by trying to get along with a few bills or running a small ad in a paper with little circulation, but how about results? Will you find that you have saved anything when you count your money at the close of the sale? Dare you take chances on $2000 worth of property to save a few dollars at the outset?

PUBLIC NOTICE

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.

The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.

There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through so nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.

Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.

But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.

The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.
